

BEING A SUNDAY SCHOOL TEACHER

By Bill Pugh

Years ago our church needed Sunday School teachers.

I was a teenager in our youth group and our leader, an elder, challenged me.

I decided to give it a go.

I was armed with a Bible and a marvellous resource of lessons in a booklet published by the Joint Board of Graded Lessons.

It had plenty of historic background to the lessons, as well as Bible readings, a prayer and a memory verse for the children to learn.

I kept one week ahead of the kids.

It was a great experience and we learned together.

Over the years I have recalled many of those Bible verses and found them most helpful in many situations of my life.

It is true to say the wisdom of the Bible is a lamp unto our feet and a light unto our path.

Being a Sunday School teacher was a privilege and a valuable learning experience.

It was a basis for my further journey to becoming a Minister of the Word and a life of preaching and teaching.
