

THE PRESBYTERY LOGO

The logo adopted by the Presbytery in 2015 conceptualises the diversity of the presbytery through shape and colour..

The broad trapezoid shape represents the geographical boundaries of the Presbytery and the red and black wedges and the white lines represent the Uniting Church in Australia's involvement and movement in the region. The black also acknowledges the First Peoples and the juxtaposition of the yellow, red and black represent the indigenous colours.

The purple represents the mountains which dominate the central part of the presbytery, through the paddocks and rural areas in yellow, the cities and towns in green and the sea at the southern end of the Presbytery in blue.
